

Index

Apologia pro index sua

This index does not include the material the clerk wrote in the margins (shown in the text as italics) as his ready reference, nor does it include the name of the attesting clerk.

I did not try to index names as they were literally written, but chose one version and indexed all variants together. The intent of the writer in many cases was difficult to determine. Not much distinguished an r from an n, and a terminal s was often a mere squiggle on the tail of the preceding letter. There were many ways to write a capital S, some of them looking very much like a capital L. For any name that you believe I have misread, please check the original and get in touch with me. I will maintain a running file of corrections for future updates to this work. Please accept my apologies.

If a document indicated a person owned slaves, I indexed those named under Slaves, sorted by the owner's last name and their own given name. If no personal name was given, I used whatever description was in the text. If the reference was generic such as 'my negroes' I indexed it once per document to mark the individual as a slaveowner.

Senior or junior are not noted in the index, nor did I include middle names or initials. I did separate Henry/Harry, John/Jonathan, Hurt/Hunt, and Smith/Smyth when those distinctions appeared to be consistent in the text. Standard forms I adopted were Hamilton, Hammon, Knifong, M'Laughlin (to include M'Glothlin), Rarsnake, Sergeant, and Wallace. Amburgey and Burgey were the same man, Berry Robinson was the same person as Littleberry Robinson. Check the index and entries carefully to be sure you have the right individual, and thanks for your patience!
